HOW TO USE THIS LEDGER

One record, filled in over years

This ledger holds the six reusable form sets from Keep the Proof with room to fill them in: Quick Capture, Full Entry, Translation and Proof Line, Monthly Sweep, Quarterly Review, and Evidence Index. Nothing here repeats the teaching; keep the handbook beside you for the rules and the worked examples. Use this document for the doing.

The habit it supports

Capture work in the Quick Capture within a day of it happening. Expand what matters into a Full Entry. Translate it into portable language and build a Proof Line. Once a month, run the Monthly Proof Sweep. Once a quarter, run the Quarterly Proof Review and update your Evidence Index. That is the whole rhythm.

Filling it in

Every form is fillable on screen in any standard PDF reader. You can also print any page and write by hand. Because a record grows past a single copy, print or duplicate the forms you use often. The Quick Capture and the Full Entry are the two you will reuse most.

The one rule that governs every form

You record your own recollection and the information you are permitted to retain. You never copy, forward, or reconstruct material your employer owns. When permission is unclear, you leave it out. If a form ever tempts you past that line, the line wins.

Keep the Proof and this ledger are educational and are not legal advice. Where a question of permission genuinely matters, ask your manager, your human resources team, or an attorney before you keep anything.

Proof Line builder

Build one portable sentence from the parts of an entry. Combine them in whatever order reads well. It must be accurate, and yours to say.

Proof Line builder		one portable sentence
Condition (the problem or situation)	Your part (what was yours)
Scope or constraint	Outcome (changed or prevented)
Support (permitted evidence or validation)
A role or public reference, when you have one. Do not store a colleague's personal details.
Proof Line (the finished portable sentence)
Combine the parts above, in whatever order reads well. Accurate, and yours to say.

FORM FOUR

Monthly Proof Sweep

Ten to fifteen minutes, once a month. Look back over the month and add what the day-to-day buried. Short is fine; the point is that nothing worth keeping is lost.

Monthly Proof Sweep

month and year

Month

Date completed

Projects, decisions, or problems I helped with this month

Anything I improved, prevented, or made possible

Quick Captures added this month (titles or count)

Confidentiality check: everything here is permitted?

Any entry to expand into a Full Entry?

FORM FIVE

Quarterly Proof Review

About thirty minutes, once a quarter. This is housekeeping, not a verdict. Read your entries, correct anything time has clarified, and index what you have so it stays findable.

Quarterly Proof Review		quarter and year
Quarter	Date completed
Entries read and confirmed still accurate
Corrections or missing context added
Strongest entries this quarter, promoted to Proof Lines
Where evidence is thin, without forcing a conclusion
Next review date	Confidentiality re-check passed?

Quarterly Evidence Index

A running list of what you have, so any entry is a search away. Update it at each quarterly review. Record only what is yours to keep; the index points to your entries, never to employer material.

Date or period	Entry	Retrieval tags	Proof Line?

When the record is the only copy you still have, this index is where you start. Keep it current, and a review, a promotion case, or an unexpected change finds you ready.
