Welcome to Keep the Proof.

You did excellent work. This system helps you hold on to the truth of it — the judgment, the decisions, and what changed — in language a stranger can follow and in a way that respects the people you work for. It builds an honest, portable record of what you actually did.

THE ONE RULE THAT NEVER BENDS

You record your own recollection and information you are permitted to retain. You never copy, forward, photograph, download, screenshot, or reconstruct material your employer owns. If permission is unclear, you leave it out and ask someone qualified. Everything in this system sits underneath that rule.

LEARN & BUILD

Keep the Proof: Guided Handbook

The teaching. Read it straight through, or jump to the part you need: how to capture your work, clarify what was actually yours, and carry it forward in language anyone can follow, with a completed example beside every tool.

KEEP USING

Your Professional Record

Your long-term working document, in an editable, copyable format you keep and control. Make one personal copy, keep it in a personally controlled account, and add to it over time. This is where the record lives for years.

PREFER PRINT OR A FORM?

Printable & Fillable Tools

The same fields as your Professional Record, for anyone who would rather write by hand or type into a form. Use whichever you will keep up — you do not need to complete both.

How to begin

Open the Guided Handbook and start with Your First 60 Minutes. In one focused session you will capture a few pieces of work, clarify one in depth, and write your first portable sentence. If your access to past work has already closed, use the reconstruct version of that session in Part Seven — you start differently, and you are not behind. Then set up Your Professional Record as the place the record lives from here on.

Keep the Proof is an educational guide to keeping a private, permitted record of your own work. It is not legal advice, and it cannot interpret your specific employment agreement, your confidentiality obligations, your employer's policies, or the laws that apply where you work. Where permission is genuinely unclear, leave the information out and ask someone qualified.
